How often have you heard the line "I'm hear from the Government and I came to help." In more cases than not, when government is involved it usually is anything but help. But on last week we had the opportunity to hear from Paul Greene a Public Affairs Specialist representing the Social Security Administration. In this case the it was true. He was here from the government and he actually came to help. With all of the complexities and bureaucracies that accompany big government more often than not it can be overwhelming and painstakingly difficult to get answers to simple questions. Well Paul Greene was on hand to dispel that myth and answer some of those questions and inform members of our club about the services that are available to them. For instance, did you know that when you are ready to apply for social security you do not have to go in person or wait in line or wade through a series of automated voice prompts on the phone. All you need to do can be done from the comfort of your home over the internet the entire process may only take about 15 minutes. The only recommendation is that you complete the process about three months before you plan to retire. It's as simple as a few clicks online and you are done. Another piece of information that he came to share involved Medicare prescription coverage

(known as Medicare D). There is federal assistance available (for those who qualify) to assist in covering the cost of the premiums. The program is simply called "Extra Help." And that is exactly what it is, it is extra help for those who need assistance in covering the costs associated with their prescription plan. So yes, they can be from the government and sometimes they actually can help. The information was definitely informative and if you do not need it, you can pass it along to others who may.

And though we know the day when Carter Donovan may need the information is a very long, long, long time away. Its good to know that she can file it away so that in 2050 she will know what to do. The real test will be to see if she can still remember how to go online and do it.

Thanks goes to Bill Sikes for securing such an informative speaker.
